

PlugSurfing Joins Forces with Vattenfall to Enable Simpler Electric Car Charging in Berlin and Hamburg

Finally it's happened! Electric car drivers can now charge with PlugSurfing at Vattenfall charging points in Hamburg and Berlin.

Berlin and Hamburg 10.11.2014 - It has long been a desire of many EV drivers to see Vattenfall's charging points join the PlugSurfing network, and now the time has come! From today, PlugSurfing users can gain access to the Vattenfall network using their PlugSurfing RFID-enabled keyhanger and pay for the session with one, simple monthly bill.

The partnership means that Berlin-based PlugSurfing now partners with all major energy providers in Germany for EV charging, including RWE, E.On and EnBW, as well as a number of charging point networks in the Netherlands and Austria. In total, some 10,000 charging points are now accessible using either the PlugSurfing keyhanger or app. The driver simply finds the charging point, starts charging with PlugSurfing and pays one simple bill at the end of the month regardless of the amount of operators used.

As explained by PlugSurfing's CEO, Adam Woolway, 'We are always happy to connect our EV drivers to new charging networks, but Vattenfall is of particular significance, not only because of the growing demand from our users, but also because, for the first time, we have been able to bridge the gulf between the two large networks in Berlin: RWE and Vattenfall.'

It is PlugSurfing's goal to connect all of Europe's charging point operators meaning that, once a member of the service, a driver will be able to simply find and pay for electric car charging wherever he/she goes.
